Quo vadis, academia?

Public Panel Discussion

Prof. Dr. Isabelle Stengers

Isabelle Stengers is Professor emerita at the Université Libre de Bruxelles. As a trained chemist and philosopher, she has written numerous books on modern science as a research object, including Nouvelle Alliance (Order out of Chaos), co-authored with Nobel Prize laureate Ilya Prigogine, The Invention of Modern Science, and Another Science is possible: A Manifesto for Slow Science.

Prof. Dr. Ulrike Felt

Ulrike Felt is Professor of Science and Technology Studies (STS) at the University of Vienna, Austria. Holding a PhD in physics and a second degree (habilitation) in the social sciences, Felt is addressing pressing issues at the intersections of science, innovation and society. Her research critically examines changing research cultures, contemporary lives in knowledge/innovation societies as well as the multiple engagements of societal actors with developments in science and technology. She is currently finishing a book on The politics of time in academic research.

Prof. Dr. Dr. h.c. Margit Osterloh

Margit Osterloh is a Professor (em.) of Business Administration at the University of Zürich, Switzerland and a research director of CREMA (Center for Research in Economics, Management and the Arts). She was member of the German Science and Humanities Council (WR) and is member of the university board of the University of Erlangen-Nürnberg. 2007 she got a honorary doctorate from the University of Lüneburg. Her special interests are research governance and women in science.

Hannah Schoch

Hannah Schoch is a PhD student in American Studies at the University of Zurich and has been co-president of VAUZ, the Association of Junior Researchers at the University of Zurich, for the past four years. As of this summer, she is also co-president of Actionuni, the Association of Midlevel Staff in Switzerland. Working towards a safe, positive and professional working environment for Early Career Researchers is a key priority of hers.
